"Hosting" a Seder
and other ways to help
during the Pandemic

Though we must practice physical distancing, we can also practice spiritual closeness. As we each look for ways to give to others during this pandemic, here are some critical ways that you can help out:

Open your seder to others with Zoom or other technology. There are families who do not know how to conduct a seder. Are you already sharing your seder on a computer or tablet with other families? Consider opening your seder to other families. Please contact Rabbi Glickman at dglickman@bethshalomkc.org if we can connect you with those who could use connection.

Reach out to others within our Beth Shalom community. Volunteers have been calling members of our synagogue to check in with them during this time of social isolation. To be on this list, please contact Stef Williams at swilliams@bethshalomkc.org.

Please consider making a donation to JFS' emergency fund at jfskc.org or the Federation's emergency fund at <https://www.jewishkansascity.org/>.

Thank you, Rabbi David M. Glickman
